Orientation and Contract:

All Exodus participants complete a 2-week program orientation. Orientation consists of a series of workshops, including employment readiness and job search training. The objective is to help them set short-term goals to combat the hopelessness and despair of the early post-release period. The orientation process focuses on guiding participants toward concrete accomplishments to demonstrate that they can take control of their future. The Exodus Contract that they sign at the beginning of orientation holds them accountable to achieving the goals they set in the areas of employment, education, fatherhood/family, spirituality, health/physical fitness, and community involvement.
